William O. Diab is a Partner on the firm's Dispute Resolution Team and Construction Law practice. His practice focuses on resolving complex commercial and construction disputes. William is a strategic problem solver. He has experience representing publicly traded and closely held companies, shareholders, investors, officers and directors, as well as Court appointed fiduciaries in matters concerning distressed transactions and corporate malfeasance. He also routinely represents real estate developers, general contractors, and design professionals in multi-party construction defect and delay cases, as well as discrete construction frauds. William has appeared in a variety of forums including state and federal courts, bankruptcy courts, arbitration, and several matters involving multi-jurisdictional parallel actions on the national and international stage.

Outside of court, William advises real estate developers on structuring their construction and development plans. He marshals a thoughtful understanding of the risks and variables that compose a construction project and the roles of each essential player to negotiate the matrix of contractual relationships between the developer, contractor, architect, engineers, subcontractors, sureties, insurers, and governmental agencies. William is routinely asked to serve as an advisor and consultant during construction to guide his clients through on-site disputes and emergencies with the objective of keeping projects on track, reducing the likelihood of litigation, and closing out the projects smoothly.
